Fashionable White Toilettes for Ladies.
As the summer season advances white gowns are the favorites for the sea shore and mountains. White flannel as well as serge are adopted for mountain costumes or yachting suits and are even worn in bicycle riding.

For the morning, white toilettes of pique, duck and linen are seen in endless combinations. Besides these, the following materials are largely in demand: China silks, barges, dotted or embroidered, Swiss muslins, and all the varieties of nainsook and dimities.
Among the novelties in summer millinery white is also popular. In the McDowell Fashion Magazines are found numerous details concerning these novelties. If you are unable to procure any of these journals from your news dealer do not take any substitute from him but apply by mail to

DEAR SIRS—I wish to give my testimonial in regard to your valuable medicine, P. P. P., for the cure of rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, biliousness, etc. In 1861 I was attacked with bilious muscular rheumatism, and have been a martyr to it ever since. I tried all the medicines I ever heard of, and all the doctors in reach, but I found only temporary relief; the pains were so bad at times that I did not care whether I lived or died. My digestion became so impaired that everything I ate disagreed with me. My wife also suffered so intensely with dyspepsia that her life was a burden to her; she would be confined to her bed for weeks at the time; she also suffered greatly from giddiness and loss of sleep. Some time in March I was advised to take P.

P. P. and before we (my wife and I) had finished the second bottle of P. P. P.,

The Celebration of the Battle of Fallen Timbers.

People From All Parts of the Country Participated.

The celebration of the 100th anniversary of the battle of Fallen Timbers on Monday last at Turkey Foot rock on the banks of the beautiful Maumee river, was an event that will be remembered by the thousands of people who participated in it, for many years to come.

The celebration was a much greater success than was anticipated and there were fully six thousand people present.

Early in the morning wagons and carriages of all styles began coming in laden with happy people of all ages from the babe in the mother's arms to the white haired tottering old men and women; the child that prattled and played on the hillside, and the old people, many of whom could well remember the days when the Indians infested the Maumee valley, recounted the tales of their pioneer life in this section.

The programme of exercises included a meeting of the Maumee Valley Pioneer association, and this association was, to a great extent, the prime movers in the celebration.

The object is to properly preserve the sites of the historic points along the Maumee valley, including Ft. Meigs, Ft. Defiance, Ft. Wayne, Ft. Miami and other points that are associated with the stirring scenes of early pioneer days.

A platform had been erected on the hillside for the speakers, and a band from Toledo enlivened the occasion with excellent music.

Judge Samuel F. Hunt of Cincinnati, was the orator of the day and his effort was a masterly one, his address being filled with historical points that were interesting alike to young and old.

Gen. P. S. Slewin and Hon. J. Kent Hamilton of Toledo also made brief addresses.

The old pioneer Col. D. W. Howard of Wauseon, who is always at the head of the procession on occasions of this kind was present, and presided over the meeting.

The Colonel was here at a time when the Indians were almost his only companions and he received the earliest part of his schooling in the old station school, conducted by the missionaries, and his schoolmates were Indian children.

The following is selected from Judge Hunt's address:

"One hundred years have passed since that day in August when this beautiful Maumee Valley echoed with musketry and resounded with the war-cry of the savage. The harvests are now being peacefully gathered to their garner, and the songs of home are un-invaded by the cries and terrors of battle."

"It is not, then, too soon to say that history must declare it a decisive battle.
It is true that it must pale before the mighty achievements of the late civil war, when vast armies were picked up on the banks of the Potomac and dropped on the banks of the Cumberland and Tennessee, and when the shouts of more than a million of men mingled with the roar of the oceans as they passed on in the serried ranks of war.
The results are scarcely less lasting for it ended in the complete subjugation of the tribes of the northwest, and enforced for the first time the provisions of the treaty of peace of 1783, by which British power was forever destroyed in the territory northwest of the Ohio river. It opened the solemn and mysterious forest which extended in melancholy wastes from the Alleghanies toward the distant Mississippi to millions of freemen, and the soil which had been gathering fertility from the repose of centuries began to bud and blossom of the rose under an intelligent husbandry. It gave birth to a new era in American civilization, and five great commonwealths bear witness that education and morality are the foundations of a good government. As we stand on this consecrated ground, where the ordinances of 1797 were enforced by the guns of Anthony Wayne, we hail the state of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, children of the great ordinance and shining stars in the crowded galaxy of our flag. Ohio looks with them to the federal constitution as the covenant of a perpetual union, and cherishes their history as a common blessing. In the spirit of a broader patriotism Ohio feels an abiding affection for every part of our common country, and pledges to the government which here fought the battle for all the full measure of devotion to every call of duty.

"The services which Gen. Wayne rendered during the war of the revolution are a part of the history of the country. He had that strong will which often governs with absolute sway and bends men and circumstances to one's purpose. It was perhaps, this characteristic that marked him in councils of war, and gave him the appellation among the soldiers of "Mad Anthony" not a term of derision but one indicating strength of will and purpose. It is related that when summoned to councils of war he usually sat apart and read "Tom Jones," or some interesting novel while the officers discussed the proposed measures. When they had severely given their opinion the commander-in-chief would inquire of Wayne, "Well, General, what do you propose to do?" "Fight, sir," is said to have been the invariable response.

"It was always his concern that the interests of the country should not suffer at his hands, and whether as a young brigadier stationed at the ford at Brandywine to oppose Knyphausen, or selected to lead the attack at Germantown, or at the head of a column at Monmouth to stay the British advance after the retreat had been ordered by Lee; or in the defense of Stony Point, the most important fortified point on the Hudson, which was committed to him after Arnold's treason had struck the army and the country with consternation, or whether entrusted with independent command to drive out of Georgia a large British force aided by several tribes of hostile Indians, or whether the army of the United States was entrusted to his command, after two disastrous defeats west of the Ohio, he courageously and fearlessly discharged his whole duty."

The following sketch is taken from Harper's Encyclopedia of History:

Anthony Wayne was born in Chester Co., Penn., Jan. 1, 1745; died at Presque Isle, (Erie), Penn., Dec. 15, 1796. His grandfather, who came to America in 1722, was commander of a squadron of dragoons under William III., at the battle of Boyne, in Ireland. Anthony, after receiving a good English education in Philadelphia, was appointed a land agent in Nova Scotia, where he remained a year. Returning, he married, and until 1774 was a farmer and surveyor in Pennsylvania. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1774-75; and in September of the latter year he raised a regiment, and was appointed colonel in January, 1776. He went with his regiment to Canada; was wounded in the battle of Three Rivers; and in February 1777, was made brigadier-general. In the battle of Brandywine in September, he was distinguished and nine days afterwards he was surprised in the night near the Paoli Tavern, on the Lancaster road, in Pennsylvania, when his command was much cut up, but the remainder retreated in safety. He led the right wing of the army in the attack at Germantown, and was slightly wounded. In the battle of Monmouth he was very distinguished; and his capture of Stony Point on the Hudson, in July, 1779, was one of the most brilliant achievements of the war. In that attack he was wounded in the head, and Congress gave him a vote of thanks and a gold medal. In June 1781, Wayne joined Lafayette in Virginia, where he performed excellent service until the capture of Cornwallis at Yorktown. He was afterwards stationed in Georgia, when he confined the British troops in Savannah until their evacuation in 1782. In 1784-85 he served in the Pennsylvania Assembly and in the convention that ratified the national Constitution. In April 1792, he was made general-in-chief of the army, and in 1795 he was engaged in hostilities with the Indians in the Northwest. He effected a peace at Greenville in August, 1795. Brave to the verge of rashness, Wayne received the name of "Mad Anthony." Yet he was discreet and cautious, fruitful in resources and prompt in the execution of plans. After his successful campaign against the Indians, he returned to Fort Presque Isle in 1796, where he died. His body was afterwards removed by his son and buried in Radnor churchyard, in his native county.
Over his remains the Pennsylvania Society of the Cincinnati caused a neat marble monument to be erected in 1809.
